

I find it appalling that the FCC is going to vote on rules changes without releasing the potential changes to the rules for public comment, or at least allowing members of Congress to see and comment on the rules changes. Such action flies in the face of every democratic principle. I urge FCC Chair Michael Powell to change his position in this very important matter. The language of the rules changes should be made public and time should be given for debate and comment before a vote is taken.